Excerpt: .of funds for construction and improvement of the railroads. 3. THE RAISING OF FUNDS FOR RAILROAD CONSTRUCTION AND BETTERMENTS The question as to whether the construction and improvement of railroads should be financed through loans or through other credit devices, or paid out of earnings, is answered differently in the various countries that have state systems. The most prominent economists agree that construction and improvement costs should be defrayed out of an increase of capital rather than out of earnings, for the net earnings are usually too small for this purpose. In railroads which are solidly built from the start, and which are constructed in a populous country, the real balance-sheet represents operations rather than property or capital.1 For in such cases the control exercised is so strict that the property can always be maintained intact in its original condition. This conception of increase...
