America Star Books, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 216 x 140 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Two schoolboys from seventh grade were held hostage by two bank robbers. The police and the robbers were playing a cat and mouse game. Even all the students in the city were asked to get involved in a search. The father of one of the kidnapped boys helped the robbers to their intended purpose of recovering the money that they should have inherited from their deceased parents and aunt. The mayor of the city played a not-so-nice part in this exciting adventure in which the paths of the police and the robbers almost intersected each other several times. Jan Schurink (1958), writing under the pseudonym Jel, was born in Enschede. He had been writing for as long as he had learned, starting with simple rhymes that grew into short stories and poems. In these stories and poems, he wrote about everyday things that went to his heart and business. After many years, he finally got his long-awaited book.
